Eabelais relates much purely out of love for his subject, especially the coarse jests and obscenities with which the work abounds, and those who seek a deeper meaning here resemble the officers of Queen Quintessence, who try to catch the wind with their nets. In it he finds not only a philosophic and metaphoric framework that is integrated into his larger vision of the universe but also one that helps him to imagine and discuss poetically the conflict within his being, for within this framework all the elements of creation are torn between their aspiration toward a harmonious union with God and the temptations of the flesh.
